KING COTTON.

The quantity of cotton wool brought into England every year might be piled into a pyramid which would rival that of Cheops. The eight thousand five hundred and seventy.two millions of miles of yarn spun in England in a year, might be round and round the earth, as a boy winds string round his top; or, we might throw the shuttle over distant Uranus, and then tangle together the "red planet Mars," the Earth, Venus, Mercury, and the Sun, in our net of cotton. The whole of the British Islands might be wrayped up in cotton wool, and put up carefully for the inspection of future ages, in not very many years' consumption of that raw mate-

Ninety years ago, at the commencement of our manufacturing career, the population of Britain was about eight millions. Now it has reached twenty-one millions. If it were not for cotton, we could not keep our millions in England, clustering in masses round the central manufacturing towns. If it were not for cotton, we could not clothe them; and if it were not for cotton, we could certainly not feed them.

It is calculated that the value of the cotton goods retained in Great Britain, for home use, if equally divided amongst the whole population, would amount to fifteen shillings and five pence for each person. But it is still more astonishing to consider that, if our exports were equally distributed, each of the eight hundred and seventy-eight millions of the inhabitants of the earth would have cotton goods to the value of fifteen pence. A rise in the price of cotton is considered in Lancashire to be a national calamity. If we look to the early part of the present century, we shall find that we then received our supplies of cotton from upwards of thirty different parts of the world, and that amongst the smallest contributions were those from the United States. At the present time, from most of the thirty countries, we receive no cotton whatever. We depend now almost entirely on the United States; that is, we receive from them ninetenths of our supply, and because that supply is insufficient, cotton rises three pence per pound.

And all this time, whilst the scarcity of cotton creates almost a panie; whilst it is calculated with alarm that the entire stock of all kinds of cotton in England is only equal to a consumption of four weeks; whilst our manufacturers declare, with a tragic mixture of resignation and despair, that raw cotton might be and ought to be, half the price it is at present; and whilst, in spite of this, the price of cotton rises, and our thirteen millions of money are as good as lost to us -all this time there lies a vast and unexplored territory, in which, from all times, cotton not only has grown, but has been cultivated. While we-or our predecessors-were tattooing our naked bodies, the inhabitants of this land were spinning cotton cloths and clothing themselves with a certain approximation to decency, and were transporting it to the sea coast for exportation, in caravans similar to that with which Joseph travelled, when his brethren left him in the pit. At this very time, whilst we seek labor here, and land there, and cotton everywhere, the tribes we allude to possess, not a narrow belt, some hundred miles in width, but a vast unexplored region, where

The cotton blooms below the barren peak; The cotton blows by every winding creek; so that any man who is so inclined gathers as much as he needs; the rest falls and drops, the manufacture of cotton has never ceased, since the ancestors of these people brought their rude spindle and distaff and looms out JAS. T. CLOSE, Actuary & General Agent. of Egypt, where the "tree-wool" of Herodotus was hardly known.

The legitimate metropolis of King Cotton's territories, is undoubtedly Western Africa. "Africa," says Doctor Livingstone, "is the very territory for cotton." And this assertion, which stands good for the parts of Af- William Gregory, rica with which he is acquainted, is most Robert Jamieson fully borneout for other parts. We have in Africa, not a country, but a continent, where cotton grows spontaneously, and has been cultivated from time anterior to history; a supply of labor abundant and cheap; and means of communication by the rivers and paths through the bush, sufficient for our present purpose. We seem, therefore, to have within our grasp the one element of continued prosperity wanting to us—namely, an important and accessible increase of the dominions of King Cotton .- Dickens' House-

"THE PLUCKY VISCOUNT" AND THE EMPERor .- I am just reminded of a Complegne anecdote of Lord Palmerston, which is going the rounds of the clubs. "Sinon e vero, e ben trocato." The Imperial hunting costume de rigueur is a Louis Quintze coat, waistcoat, and breeches, with high boots. Lord Palmerston turned out for one of the Imperial parties de chasse equipped in his Hampshire "pink," well known in every gorse and spinny for many a mile about Broadlands. The day was drizzly, and threatening heavy rain. The Emperor urged his guest to put on a redingote. "Oh, no your Majesty," was Lord Palmerston's plucky and pointed reply. "you know nothing ever gets through our redcoats." This to the "Nephew of my Uncle," with Waterloo "undigested," I think was telling and spirited .- London Cor-

The Charter of this Company offers more favorable advantages to the farmer and others, than any other Company chartered in the State, by insuring with or without a premium note. If the applicant prefer, he can pay the full amount of the premium in eash, or by effecting a cash insurance for two years, the insured saves one-eighth of the amount he would otherwise have to pay; or by becoming a member, and giving a small premium note, the inared saves nearly one-half of the amount charged by Stock Companies, when insuring from year to year. This is the advantage resulting from the combination of THE CASH AND MUTUAL This Company commenced issuing Policies against loss or damage by fire, on the 16th of March, 1854, since which time over five thousand seven hundred persons have insured and become members of the Company, and over thirty thou-sand dollars have been paid for losses. Having trebled our business during the past year, we feel grateful for the liberal patronage bestowed upon the Company thus far, and for its flattering pros-pects of future usefulness. The Directors hope and believe, that, by prudence, caution, and a rigid system of economy, they will establish for this ompany a reputation for cheapness and safety rpassed by any Company in the U.
